Comptroller Lierman Celebrates Opening of New Rockville Branch Office

New Rockville branch expands access to Comptroller services for residents and businesses in Montgomery County

ROCKVILLE, Md. (July 29, 2026) — Comptroller Brooke E. Lierman today joined state and local leaders to celebrate the opening of the Comptroller of Maryland’s new Rockville Branch Office, marking an important investment in customer service and expanding access to in-person assistance for residents and businesses across Montgomery County.

The new office, located at 800 King Farm Blvd., will allow Marylanders to connect in person with the Comptroller’s Office for assistance with filing taxes, claiming unclaimed property, applying for tax credits, and accessing a wide range of taxpayer services.

“Every Marylander deserves convenient access to the services they need,” said Comptroller Brooke E. Lierman. “The opening of our new Rockville Branch Office reflects our commitment to meeting taxpayers where they are and delivering responsive, accessible service. Whether someone needs help filing a tax return, recovering unclaimed property, or navigating a tax credit, our team is here to help.”

The Rockville Branch Office is one of 11 regional offices operated by the Comptroller’s Office to provide in-person assistance throughout Maryland. This is the fourth new branch office to open during Comptroller Lierman’s tenure, reflecting a broader modernization initiative to expand services and better meet the needs of communities across Maryland.

“The Department of General Services is proud to partner with the Comptroller’s Office to deliver modern, accessible facilities that better serve Marylanders,” said Maryland Department of General Services Secretary Atif Chaudhry. “This new branch office demonstrates what we can accomplish when we invest in public infrastructure that improves how government serves our communities.”

“This new office represents a meaningful investment in Montgomery County residents and businesses,” said Maryland State Senator Craig Zucker. “Having greater access to in-person assistance will help ensure taxpayers can receive the support they need while strengthening the partnership between state government and the communities we serve.”

“Montgomery County is home to one of the most vibrant business communities in Maryland, and this new office will make it easier for both businesses and residents to access important state services,” said Montgomery County Executive Marc Elrich. “I appreciate the Comptroller’s commitment to providing accessible, customer-focused government.”

“We’re excited to welcome the Comptroller’s new branch office to Rockville,” said Rockville Mayor Monique Ashton. “Its location will provide convenient access for residents throughout our community while reinforcing Rockville’s role as a hub for government services in Montgomery County.”
